SOUTHAMPTON COMMUNITY BAND
News & Notes

Wow. What a response to our first concert of the season! The band worked very hard for you, and was excited to perform. Your energy and enthusiasm helped fuel us throughout the night. Based on your feedback, it seems like we may have few new traditions to keep... I wanted to take this opportunity to get you ready for our upcoming concert and share a few other items with you. Please read on.

When our first concert ended on November 21, two thoughts crept into my head: "Wow! That was fun!" and, "It's too taxing to conduct a concert and narrate at the same time." Many band members and audience members agreed with both of these thoughts. With that in mind, I'm pleased to announce that our concerts will now be narrated by Karl Rahmer. Karl is a long-time subscriber of the band, and even has some radio credentials on his resume. I'm sure he will be a great addition to the performance experience; please welcome him! Now, on to the concert.

I am very confident that you will enjoy our upcoming concert, "A Classical Twist." We will provide you with a variety of classic orchestral music; music that you may recognize from many facets of your life. Most of our exposure to classical music comes from things like television, commercial advertising, sporting events, and movies. If we hear even a small portion of that music again we remember back to a certain movie scene or product line.

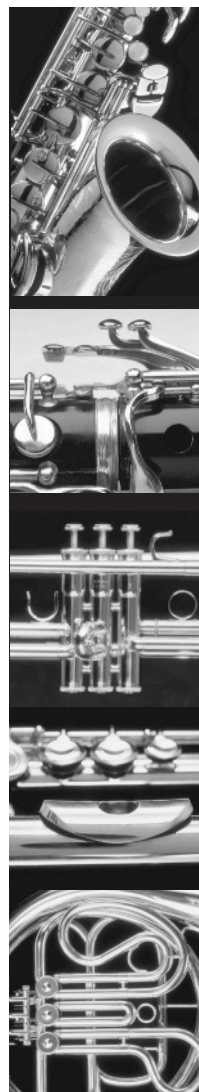

All of the music we'll play for you has some importance to mainstream or popular culture. However, equally as important, these pieces have their own special histories that stand apart from their mainstream successes. I personally have a special place in my heart for the "Beef. It's What's For Dinner." advertising campaign, which helped myself and several friends develop a special love for Aaron Copland and American orchestral composers in general.

On January 30, we hope you will join us as we stir up some memories you may have and some history that you may not have known was there. Bring a friend because we're going to have a good time!
